Your Money, Your Life

People have used all sort of different money boxes to help them save.

What did you keep your money in when you were growing up?

How did you earn money?

Were you good at saving?

What did you spend your money on?

What was the first big thing you saved up for?

Create a money memory box

You can use anything from a cardboard box, an old tin, or something that looks like a money box you once used.

Fill it with memories of what life was like when you were growing up. You could include pictures, clippings, drawings or objects.

Add to your memory box over time. The process of making it is just as important as using it as a conversation starter.
